

GCG Game Plan

What it does for the team, and for us

One place where every person is matched to the right task, sees only what matters now, and leaves a record of what they did. Built for how Gold Coast Games runs events.

What it does for us

Right person, right task

Suggestions come from what people said yes to, their titles and past work. Someone who said no to tech is never suggested a tech task.

Only what matters now

People see the current stage first, most important on top. Later stages wait.

First come, first served

Anything left over is up for grabs. If two people tap at once, the earlier tap wins.

A fair record

Every contribution is logged, so credit and pay can follow real work.

Ready for a year of events

Export by person, by year, or everything, as spreadsheets.

How an event starts

1. Hinda sets the event up as a draft and takes off what is already covered.
2. A 15 to 20 minute call: people say what they can and cannot do, and take their tasks live.
3. The event is published. Leftover tasks appear as up for grabs, first come, first served.
4. Each person sees their tasks by stage. Hinda watches gaps, not every task.
5. After the event, the record of who did what is saved for fair credit.

For team members

What each person sees

Start in ten minutes

A short, friendly game replaces a form. People know what to expect and can stop and pick up later.

Perk: Every person feels seen from the first minute, and nobody loses their progress.

Game Plan

Find where you fit

We want a clear picture of everyone:
what you are good at, what you have done before, and where you could fit at GCG.

Seven real situations

Tap what is most like you and what is least like you.

Perk: Choosing between good options is harder to fake than rating yourself, so the profile is honest.

What the founder sees

Today: a short control screen

A bell for anything new, four counts, what needs you, and what is up for grabs.

Perk: Where to step in, without reading a dashboard.

Set the event up before anyone sees it

Take off what is already covered (the venue, the DJ), add anything extra, and only then publish to the team.

Perk: No unnecessary asks, no confusion. The team sees a clean list.

Draft

The team cannot see this event yet.

Get it right before anyone sees it

1. Take off what is already covered.

Venue booked? DJ sorted? Mark it and it never shows up as an ask.

2. Add anything extra this event needs.

3. Assign the people you have already agreed with, then publish.
