

GCG Game Plan

Every page, with an example event and a finished profile

Each page below is a real screen from the app, filled in with an example: a member called Ama who has finished her profile, three teammates, and one published event with tasks, offers and attendance answers. Red numbers on the screen match the notes beside it: what the thing is, and why it is there.

How to use it: look for what feels off in style (spacing, weight, colour, wording) and mark it. Notes on each page say what the element is for, so you can judge whether a change would lose that purpose.

Your player card, your profile, and your own Game Plan: what to do next, your events and your place at GCG. Hinda sees your answers. The crew sees your About, plus anything you choose to share.

Your name

1 rst name is fine

2 Let's play →

- 1 Only a first name is asked. Keeps the start friction near zero.
- 2 A game framing instead of a questionnaire. Progress is saved at every step, so people can stop and return.

Warm-up

What kind of work makes you lose track of time. Multiple choice, no wrong answers.

- 1 Tap as many as you like. This is the easy first win and starts the trait picture.
- 2 Needs at least one pick so the later steps have something to build on.

Not for me

Say yes to what appeals. Skip anything you are unsure about. You never have to say no. 'Not for me' just stops us suggesting that job.

- 1 The job, what it covers, and what makes someone a good fit. No jargon.
- 2 Yes and Maybe are the main answers. Matching uses these.
- 3 Skip and Not for me are quiet and optional, so nobody is forced to say no.

The style at a glance

The tokens the whole page is built from, so you can say what to change in one place.

Background #F6F1E6

Card #FFFDF8

Ink #1A1611

Muted text #6B6357

Red (behind, never) #D7263D

Gold (now, open) #F6B80F

Green (done, yes) #12894A

Night band #15110C

- Type: Sora (headings, numbers) and DM Sans (body). Light by default; dark is a toggle on Me.
- Shape: rounded cards with a soft border, large tap targets (about 44 px), one gold primary button per screen.
- Colour blocking: red means behind or stuck, gold means this week, green means done or yes, so a long list can be skimmed.
- Wording rules: no emojis, no commanding words (Essential, not Must), plain sentences, one idea per screen.
- Privacy rules shown in the UI: members see their own detail and the team's pace (On track or Behind); admins see percentages and everyone's profile.
